

We love this...

Just like with fashion, furniture designers will always gain inspiration from the past and marry it with modern details and influences. Save your favourite items, whether clothing or furniture, for 30 years and it will almost definitely come back into fashion. Give your home a throw-back allure, because this October it is retro o'clock.

By Charlotte van Hek | Press photos

Experts in timeless cleanness. Originally, Finn Juhl designed this sofa for Baker Furniture Inc. in the USA in 1951. The sculptural forms are inspired by modern free art and would effortlessly fit into any '50s or '60s living room.

Baker Sofa by Finn Juhl, from £9,616
via www.skandium.com

Is it a seat? Is it a drawer? It is both! This bench drawer perfectly mixes stylish Scandinavian design with a vintage touch. Its deep drawer is ideal for an entrance hall to store sunglasses, gloves and keys. Functional plus retro chic? Yes, please.

Londress bench drawer, £275
via www.pib-home.co.uk

Peace and love were the cornerstones of the '60s and '70s. This poster by illustrator Børge Bredenkjær will look fabulous above any bed, couch or chest of drawers. And, of no less importance, every sale of this poster supports cancer research.

Available in three sizes, starting from approx. £25
Magnetic frame, starting from approx. £32
www.paper-collective.com

A vintage-allure lamp with a traditional shape fused with a very modern touch, this Leimu table lamp has been inspired by the combination of glass and concrete in modern architecture. Whether modern or retro, this lamp will do on any table.

Magnus Pettersen lamp, £549
Via www.iittala.com

Designorget means iconic Swedish design. This small and handy portable speaker has a surprisingly big sound for its size, and is destined to be taken everywhere with you. The speakers are finished with leather details and silver buttons – because even listening to music can happen in style.

Designorget speakers, approx. £213

www.designorget.se

